AIRBUS ASCENDING

Boeing and Airbus together account for 65% of the world airliner fleet, but the European airframer has boosted its share at the expense of its US rival

DAVID KAMINSKI-MORROW LONDON

Airbus was the main contributor to the slight increase in world airliner population indicated by trends in global fleet data, as a decline in older Boeing types marginally reduced the US airframer's presence.

Airbus's share of the in-service worldwide fleet crept above 25% at just fewer than 6,400 aircraft. Boeing's figure declined to below 40%, although its total stayed above 10,000. Between them, the manufacturers accounted for almost two-thirds of the 23,378 aircraft in Flightglobal's latest annual airliner census, a total that points to a population rise of 1.8% during the previous 12 months.

While the data suggest continuing momentum for the Airbus A320 – an 8.7% growth rate took the fleet close to 4,800 jets – this rise was exceeded by the 10.5% surge for modern variants of the rival Boeing 737.

These variants – from the 737-600 upwards – accounted for 3,875 aircraft, while another 1,476 older-generation 737s remain in service, although the census indicates this fleet is declining as rapidly as its successor is expanding.

During 2012's first seven months, Airbus delivered 253 A320-family jets while Boeing handed over 241 737s.

The census points to the number of parked aircraft remaining relatively high, the stored fleet climbing above 3,900 airframes. While the parked proportion of the world total, 13.4%, is mathematically the highest for three years, it has essentially stayed around the same level since the sharp upward spike in fuel prices in mid-2008 sparked a clear-out of inefficient types.

UNSURPRISING SLUMP

Jet fuel prices rose steadily during 2009-2010 and have hovered around the $120 per barrel level since the beginning of 2011. This has accelerated not only the retirement of older types – data for the McDonnell Douglas DC-9 and Boeing MD-80 showed an unsurprising slump in the total fleet – but also that of smaller-capacity regional jets whose operating economics have been sliding into the wrong side of the cost equation.

A380 deliveries have reached 80

JET STORAGE – LAST 10 YEARS

SOURCE: Flightglobal ACAS database (August 2012)

Census figures reflect this trend through a 4.2% fall in the Bombardier CRJ200 fleet to about 700 aircraft. However, a 14% surge in take-up of the larger 70- to 90-seat family offered by Embraer to more than 830 catapulted the type two places up the regional aircraft ranks to second.

Despite the popularity of the Brazilian jets, Bombardier's long-established Dash 8/Q Series turboprops clung on to the top position in the regional category. Embraer pushed ATR down into third position although the turboprop manufacturer, buoyed by the cost of fuel, has experienced a glut of orders for its aircraft.

The demise of the 50-seat jet market is likely to result in extensive restructuring of regional fleets, particularly in the USA, as local » connections become unrealistic and airlines opt to serve more significant feeder points with larger types.

Bombardier remained the third-placed airframer behind Boeing and Airbus in the global fleet data, ahead of Embraer and ATR. These five accounted for 84% of the world fleet, with Antonov in sixth place. Antonov's contribution of about 600 aircraft is a remnant of Soviet-era mass production, as the total output for modern Russian efforts – primarily the An-148 and Sukhoi Superjet 100 – has barely moved into double figures, while Tupolev's Tu-204SM programme shows few signs of life.

CONTRASTING FORTUNES

United Aircraft delivered seven commercial jets to customers and had laid plans to deliver another 36 this year, among them 24 Superjets and nine An-148s.

The census reveals the decline of the Boeing 757, the fleet total falling to 860 aircraft, as well as the Airbus A340, poor sales of which prompted the European airframer to formally cease production of the type towards the end of last year.

However the A330 continues to thrive, its popularity lifted in part by delays to the Boeing 787, which entered service last year.

Boeing's 777 has similarly kept pace, with a near-9% increase in the fleet taking the type's presence to more than 1,000 airframes.

Airbus is extending the appeal of the A330 – which has secured more than 1,200 orders – by enhancing its performance through a hike in maximum take-off weight, even as the airframer positions its A350 as a successor.

Boeing is countering the A350 not only with the 787 – a third variant of which, the -10, appears closer to realisation – but also a possible upgrade to the 777.

In the large-capacity sector, the total number of Boeing 747s – of which the new 747-8 is a derivative – fell below 700 aircraft, while the Airbus A380, with only 80 deliveries to the end of July, has yet to feature in the top 10.

While Asia – combined with Australasia and the Middle East – lies behind the Americas and Europe in the geographical distribution of the world's airliners, with a 27% share, the order backlog shows the strength of the region in terms of future business. The census indicates that almost 50% of the backlog of nearly 8,000 aircraft is bound for the region, with the Americas accounting for another 27%. Europe's backlog covers 20% of the total, while a minimal share is taken up by Africa.

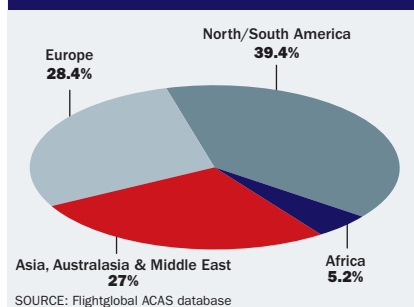

Although the backlog split between the two major airframers is largely equal, Airbus has the edge over Boeing in the Asian region while its US rival, perhaps unsurprisingly, holds a stronger position in the Americas.

AIRBUS/BOEING ORDER BACKLOG

EXPLANATORY NOTES

This census data covers all commercial jet and turboprop-powered transport aircraft in service or on firm order with airlines worldwide, excluding aircraft that carry fewer than 14 passengers or equivalent cargo. It records the fleets of Western, Chinese-built and Russia/CIS/Ukraine-built airliners.

The tables have been compiled by Flightglobal Insight using Flightglobal's ACAS database.

The information is correct up to July 2012 and excludes non-airline operators, such as leasing companies and the military. Aircraft are listed in alphabetical order, first by manufacturer and then type.

Operators are listed by region, with any aircraft variant in brackets next to the operator's name.

Fleet data comprises the in-service fleet and, where applicable, the outstanding firm orders in parentheses in the right-hand column.

On the ACAS database, an airliner is defined as being "in service" if it is either "active" (in other words accumulating flying hours) or "parked".

An aircraft is classified as "parked" if it is known to be inactive – for example, if it is grounded because of airworthiness requirements or in storage – and when flying hours for three consecutive months are reported as zero.

The exception is where the aircraft is undergoing maintenance, where it will remain classified as active. Aircraft awaiting a conversion will be shown as parked.

The region is dictated by operator base and does not necessarily indicate the area of operation. Options and letters of intent (where a firm contract has not been signed) are not included. Orders by, and aircraft with, leasing companies and holding companies such as China Aviation Supplies are excluded, unless a confirmed end-user is known – in which case the aircraft is shown against the airline concerned.

Operators' fleets include leased aircraft. Aircraft being operated on wet-lease are generally listed with the company flying the aircraft, rather than the airline for which they are being operated.

The Russian/CIS/Ukrainian fleet data is based on information from the Russian commercial aircraft register, which can sometimes show aircraft owned by the state to be returned to the state when they are not being operated – for example, while undergoing maintenance. Because the data does not differentiate between aircraft returned temporarily or permanently, some airlines that have been temporarily removed from an airline's fleet and returned to the state may not be shown as being with the airline for which they operate. Russian aircraft tend to spend a long time parked before being permanently retired – much longer than equivalent western aircraft – so it can be difficult to establish the exact status of the "available fleet" (parked aircraft that could be returned to operation).

Aircraft finance newsletter

The screenshot shows the layout of the 'Aircraft finance newsletter' from Flightglobal. At the top, it features the 'ASCEND 2020 Finance Forum London 10th - 11th July 2013' banner. Below this, there are several sections: 'Aircraft finance headlines' with a list of news items; 'Programme Watch' and 'Special reports' with sub-topics like 'Boeing completes first 787 test flight' and 'Finance & Leasing'; a 'Job of the Week' section for an Aviation Airframe and Powerplant Technician; and 'Active Employment & Fleet Forecast Trends' with a link to download a free copy. The newsletter also includes a 'Share this email' button and a 'Book before 15th March' promotion for the ASCEND forum.

To receive FREE fortnightly news and analysis from the aircraft finance sector with content from Flight International and Flightglobal.com, simply sign up at:

COMMERCIAL FLEET FORECAST

GLOBAL: 2012-2031

The Commercial Fleet Forecast is a robust independent report providing a detailed forecast for the likely size and shape of the world airliner fleet over the next 20 years.

IN THIS REPORT

- Passenger and freighter demand including:
 - Fleet size
 - Deliveries
 - Order backlog
 - Retirements
- Analysis divided in six world regions plus a separate section on China
- Covers all modern commercial airliners over 20-seats
- Detailed forecasts for aircraft categories down to model series

THREE FORECASTS IN ONE

The Forecast covers three areas:

- the top-line fleet driven by demand
- which aircraft are retained to continue serving demand
- new deliveries to meet growth in demand and as replacements to fill the gap left by removals

Independent analysis...

- from trusted brands
- based on world leading data
- with a robust methodology

...informing your business

- through detailed analysis
- with expert commentary
- plus full data tables in Excel

The Commercial Fleet Forecast is available in print and is supplied with a comprehensive, updated set of data used in the analysis in Excel format.
